BRITISH DECIDE UPON WITHDRAWAL TO PREVENT MOHAMMEDANS FROM FIGHTING OWN RACE.

FEAR SERIOUS TROUBLE

Mutinies Which Demanded Action on Part of Australian Regiments, Resulted in Bloodshed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, Feb. 18.—The Cologne Volks-Zeitung says that Major General Sir John Maxwell, commander of the British forces in Egypt, has ordered the withdrawal of Mohammedan troops from the Suez Canal and their transportation to another war theatre, where they will not fight against other Mohammedans. It is said there have been frequent desertions among these troops.

Hindu Troops Mutiny.
A mutiny of Hindu troops in Egypt is reported by the Cologne Volks-Zeitung, as quoted by the Overseas News Agency. It is said an entire regiment mutinied, killing twelve officers, including a major, and other Hindu troops went over to the mutineers. The news agency statement follows:
The Cologne Volks-Zeitung publishes a report from reliable sources in Egypt that serious opposition has developed among the Hindu troops of the British. A campaign captain of the Australian troops named Brown, on Jan. 10, shot two Mohammedan soldiers, who had made a mistake, the Volks-Zeitung says. Hindus who witnessed the incident killed the captain with a bayonet. The whole regiment then mutinied. A majority of the officers saved themselves by flight, but twelve of them, including the commander of the regiment and a major, were killed.

Australians Disperse Mutineers.
Other Hindu troops were sent to suppress the mutiny, but refused to go on the mutineers, to whom part of them went over. After two hours of fighting with Australian regiments part of the mutineers fled into the desert. The others were killed or wounded.

LOWER BIRTH RATE STIRS UP GERMANY

Representative of Ministry Brings Matter Up at Session of Prussian Budget Committee.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, via London, Feb. 18.—The declining birth rate in Germany, which was attracting attention before the war, is receiving more serious consideration at the present time, in view of the losses sustained in the field. The subject was brought up today in the budget committee of the Prussian diet. A representative of the ministry persisted that unless a radical change would be made, Germany would soon be in the same position as France, with deaths exceeding births. The speaker also referred to the high rate of infant mortality. He also said that one of the gravest hindrances to the growth of the population was an increase in number of premature births, caused deliberately, an evil which was not confined to the poorer classes. The minister of education said he recognized the seriousness of the situation. He informed the committee the government already had taken the matter under consideration and was conferring with specialists in an effort to devise ways of remedying the evil.

CORRECTS STATEMENT ON LAW'S PROVISIONS

Requirements of Wisconsin Law Relative to Delegates, Different From Other States.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 18.—The candidate for delegates to the national convention of political parties who receive the largest number of votes on April 4 will be seated in the convention, contrary to an industriously circulated report. It is evident that this report was sent out to induce voters to believe that no matter how many votes were cast for the delegates nominated at the republican state convention, they would not be entitled to seats in the convention unless they had declared for a candidate for president; that this candidate had received more votes than Senator La Follette and that the name of the candidate had appeared on the ballot.

There has been some confusion as to the Wisconsin law, and the Minnesota law has been cited to prove this contention. As a matter of fact this contention is untrue. It is true in Minnesota that the law provides that the candidate for delegate to a national convention shall, among other things, "declare that he will, to the best of his judgment and ability, faithfully carry out the wishes and preferences of the voters of his political party as expressed at such nominating election."

The law says further that "the person receiving the highest number of votes of his party voters shall be declared to be the choice of such party for the office of president of the United States, and the delegates shall to the best of their judgment and ability, faithfully carry out the wishes and preferences of the voters of his political party as expressed at such election."

It is plain that in Minnesota there is at least a moral obligation, if not a legal one, which cannot be disregarded by the delegates. That this moral obligation is not found in the Wisconsin law, much less a legal one, also is plain.

The law says plainly, first, that the candidates receiving the largest number of votes shall be declared elected. Reference to the presidential preference primary is found in the following section:

"(6) For the purpose of enabling every voter to express his choice for the nomination of candidates for president and vice president of the United States, whenever there shall be filed with the secretary of state nomination papers as provided by section 5.05 and 5.07 of the statutes (relating to the conduct of the primary election) the names of such candidates shall be certified to the county clerks, and shall be printed as certified upon the official party ticket used at the election of delegates."

It is plain that if a candidate declares that he believes in an uninstructed delegation, or for any other principle of organization adopted by steps, the highest number of votes, he will be regularly elected and qualified, and he will be morally bound to carry out the principles upon which he sought votes, and no others, which he sought by the voters as a perfectly fair proposition.

ARKANSAS SENATOR BARES INADEQUACY OF AVIATION CORPS

Produces Photographs of Letters of Officers Showing Inefficiency of United States Aviation Service.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Feb. 18.—Photographic copies of correspondence between officers of the aviation corps which Senator Robinson of Arkansas declared established beyond doubt the defective condition of the aviation service, were shown by him to senate military committee today.

Letters revealing inadequacy. A letter to the committee purported to be from Colonel Reber, head of the service, to Captain Cowan, in charge at San Diego, read:

"I wish you would have your engineering department get me out some drawings for size of sheets to be placed under seats of aviators for alleged armor protection. I will have several of these plates made and we can say we have armored airplanes, not that I think it is vitally essential, but in order that we can meet any charge that our machines are not armored."

Captain Cowan, in a letter to Colonel Reber, declared "if the service ever came under investigation by any one outside our own corps it would be impossible to explain the conditions in which the work has been handled."

Instructed to Secrecy. Senator Robinson declared the defective condition of equipment of the aviation service at San Diego could be established beyond doubt, and that Colonel Reber had instructed the captain to keep it secret.

Colonel Cowan wrote Captain Cowan, Senator Robinson June 1915, saying: "I note in the weekly letter that a reference is made to the condition of machines and motors. This information should not be made public."

Senator Robinson declared before the committee to urge the adoption of his resolution to provide for a congressional investigation of the aviation service.

WANT LICENSE FUND FOR GAME WARDENS

Hundred Thousand Dollars Received By the State, Sportsmen Say, Should Be Used in Game Protection.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Appleton, Feb. 18.—Members of the Outagamie County Game and Protective association said this morning there were no game warden's licenses in nine or ten counties and that as soon as they were formed in one-third of the state an effort would be made to recover for the game warden's department $100,000 which, they claimed, was paid from that department to the general state fund.

It is also claimed that the money collected from hunting licenses should be used for protecting game instead of for general state expenses, and that as a result of transfer of the money to the general fund a sufficient number of game wardens to protect game would not be maintained.

It was intimated that suit will be brought to compel the state to refund the $100,000 to the game warden's department.

Another step will probably be taken to have Lake Winnebago and other waters in Winnebago county included in the closed waters.

TAKE PRECAUTIONS TO SAFEGUARD K. C. BALL IN NEW YORK

Fearing That Presence of Cronin in Gotham May Portend Anarchistic Disturbance.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Feb. 18.—The fact that Jean Cronin, the anarchist chief who is accused of poisoning the soup at a dinner given by Catholic clergy to Archbishop Mundelein in Chicago, is supposed to be in this city, caused police today to take extraordinary precautions to safeguard guests at the ball to be given tonight by the Knights of Columbus.

Dignitaries to Attend. The ball is to be held in Madison Square Garden, and Governor Whitman, high city officials and many dignitaries of the Catholic church, are expected to be present.

Detectives have been ordered to watch every section of the auditorium and another large detail will patrol the entire floor of the garden. The police have been ordered to renewed activity by the definite establishment of the fact that the two letters received by the New Times and purporting to have been written by Cronin, were mailed in New York. The second letter, which was received by the Times last night and published this morning, conveyed a threat that a new outrage was planned in this city.

Another Letter from Cronin. Following the publication this morning in New York papers of another letter believed to have been written by Jean Cronin, former assistant chief of the University club of Chicago, local police officials put on New York authorities the burden of responsibility for Cronin's arrest. Cronin was wanted in connection with the putting of poison in soup at a banquet recently given for Archbishop Mundelein.

Federal agents continued today in their efforts to assist local authorities in running down a report that the poisoning was the result of an anti-clerical plot of nation-wide proportion. It was learned today that federal operatives received warnings of such a conspiracy more than three months ago.

ERZERUM'S CAPTURE TO SWING ROUMANIA INTO ALLIES' RANKS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Feb. 18.—Dispatches from Bucharest, state the capture of Erzerum by the Russians is crystallizing the decision of Roumania to intervene at an early date, says the Home correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company.

Taken in Bayonet Attack. Petrograd, Feb. 18.—The fall of Erzerum, the most important Turkish stronghold in Asia Minor, and for a long time considered impregnable, offers the unprecedented spectacle of a first-class fortress built on a steep mountain ridge, nearly a mile above sea level, yielding to a lone Russian detachment, after only thirty-six hours' bombardment.

The operations were conducted under the most severe weather conditions, the thermometer registering at times thirty degrees below zero, Fahrenheit. The Turkish army, defending Erzerum, taken by surprise, under the methods adopted by the Russians, is now said to be in disorderly flight on the roads leading to Sivas. As the Russian victory is apparently secured in all directions, it is assumed here that large numbers of men were taken prisoners, although official figures are still lacking.

LODGE SEES NEUTRALITY ENDANGERED

SENATOR DECLARES PRINCIPLES LAID DOWN AT BEGINNING OF WAR MUST BE FOLLOWED.

NO CHANGE IN POLICY

Insists Upon Rights of United States Citizens to Travel on Belligerent Ships Armed Solely for Defense.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, D. C., February 18.—Senator Lodge, ranking minority member of the foreign relations committee, made a speech in the senate today, declaring that abandonment by the United States at this time of the principle that its ports be opened to and its citizens free to travel upon merchantmen of belligerent nations, armed solely for defensive purposes, would be an "unneutral act and a step toward war. He said it would make the United States the ally of the belligerent whose merchant marine had been swept from the seas."

The senator spoke at length dwelling upon the history of international law, relating to arming of merchantmen for defense, and citing precedents in the records of the United States. He referred to the report that the administration was preparing to change its policy, which has been denied by Secretary Lansing, since the issue of German and Austrian memorandums, announcing their intention to treat armed merchant ships as war vessels after February 29.

Defends American Rights. "As late as the president's note of May 12, 1915, signed by Mr. Bryan," Senator Lodge said, "this government recognized that 'American citizens were within their undisputed rights in taking their ships and in traveling upon a belligerent merchantman, subject to all the rules which have been established by the courts, and by all international authorities for at least twenty years.'"

"The abandonment of these rights by any neutral government on the employment of submarines with the necessary limitation upon the powers of capture, would be a grave and unconscionable act. Such abandonment should only rest on the ground that the right of neutrals, the rules which for centuries have been agreed upon by all nations in the protection of innocent lives upon vessels, and which must be thrown aside and discarded in order that a new instrument of maritime destruction must not be impeded in its work of piracy and murder. Such a doctrine is revolting to the instinct of humanity, to every principle of law and justice."

Endangers Neutrality. "There is, however, another side to this matter," he said, "and that is of importance. There can be no question that any act by a neutral, which alters conditions created by the war, is an international act, and places the neutral upon the side of one belligerent or the other."

"This is immeminently true of any form of embargo, and there is no need that I should repeat the unanswerable argument on this point embodied in Mr. Lansing in his note of last August to the government of Austria-Hungary. The war, and the war alone, has also created a new and unexampled change at this time in the attitude, which we took officially at the outset of the war, in regard to armed merchantmen, could be an unneutral act. The merchantmen of one belligerent have been swept from the seas. Therefore, if we should abandon all the principles on this subject, that we have ever sustained, we should abandon the rules laid down by the war, and declare that our ports were closed to armed merchantmen or that goods and passengers from the United States could not be placed on an unarmored merchantman, armed solely for self-defense, our action would affect only one belligerent; it would also constitute a step toward war, and would, therefore, be unneutral. It would make us at once the ally of the belligerent whose merchant marine has been driven from the ocean. It would be a step toward war."

WHITE BEAUTY COMMISSION DENIES

CUSHING AN AWARD

Janesville Man Injured in Automobile Accident at Beloit Oct. 2, 1914, Not Entitled to Damages.

Following a hearing held by an adjutor of the industrial commission at the circuit court chambers on Thursday, Feb. 10, in the matter of the application for damages of Thomas W. Cushing against Robert D. Buggs under the compensation act, the commission has filed its decision denying an award to Cushing and dismissing the application. Cushing sought to recover for injuries received in an automobile accident at Beloit on Oct. 2, 1914, in which George W. Jones was killed. The commission held that Cushing was not performing a service growing out of and incidental to his employment. W. H. Dougherty was attorney for the applicant and M. O. Mout for the respondent.

The commission's findings of fact were as follows: "On Oct. 2, 1914, the respondent was an employer subject to the provisions of Sections 2394-2 to 2394-21, inclusive, of the Wisconsin statutes; that on Oct. 2, 1914, the applicant was an employee of the respondent; that the applicant sustained personal injuries; that at the time of the accident the applicant was not performing a service growing out of and incidental to his employment; that the applicant did not give his employer notice in writing of a claim for injury within thirty days after Oct. 2, 1914; that the applicant did not give his employer notice of the claim within some three or four months after the accident; that the commission cannot find as a fact that the employer was misled by failure to give the notice in writing in compliance with the statute. "Now, therefore, it is ordered that the application herein and the same is hereby dismissed." Signed by the commission, J. D. Beck, F. M. Wilcox and Geo. P. Hambrecht.

SAYS PAY UP WEEK OLD CHINESE CUSTOM

Local Man Relates Idea is Only an Improvement on Century Old Chinese Custom.

"In inaugurating National Pay-Up Week," said a Janesville man, who is regarded more or less as a history book worm, "Janesville and other communities who have taken up the plan are improving on a custom which is old custom of the Chinese who, it is well known, will not enter the new year with the slightest debt hanging over them. Two Pay-Up Weeks within a year would be a little better than Janesville, but it won't hurt any one except a few dead beats—and dead beats don't count for much anyway."

And the above statement seems to be the opinion voiced on every side since the idea was first originated here. Janesville participates in National Pay-Up Week next week, Feb. 21st to 28th.

The merchants have already started their campaign and have their bills ready to be mailed on Monday. They have also had a large number of posters announcing the fact that next week is Pay-Up Week printed and these are to be displayed in conspicuous places in their stores and windows.

It alone remains for their debtors to enter into the enthusiasm of the week and make it a success in Janesville. Pay the merchant and he can pay every other bill and Harry who has bills outstanding against him and a wave of prosperity is sure to come, for prosperity is no more evident than when everybody is clear of debt.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

A single drop of blood with its red and white corpuscles, containing potassium, sodium, phosphorus, calcium, magnesium, sulphur, iron, etc., is sufficient to confound all the wisdom of the world.

We have seen the minerals that are present in the internal secretions of the body.

It is evident that these minerals are not present through the operation of blind accident. It is just as has regulated their presence and proportions. In the clearly disclosed evidences of that intelligence we behold the wisdom of God.

Water forms about three-fourths of the weight of the adult body, and is the medium in which the chemical changes of the body are carried on. It could transfer an iron tank filled with pure sulphuric acid from San Francisco to New York and back again and the acid would not affect the tank in any manner. But if we poured sulphuric acid into that tank the acid would immediately become active and destroy the tank.

In the case of the plant water is so necessary that without it no plant can exist. Plants that have but a single cell, which are not actually immersed in water, are generally to be found in more or less moist situations where they continually obtain supplies of water from dew or rain.

In times of drought they are seriously injured. The young cells which are enclosed with a cell membrane readily shows a tendency to accumulate water in its interior. Gradually drops of water appear, until ultimately a vacuole, which is almost full of liquid, is formed.

In the plant which consists of a number of cells such a vacuole is found in every adult cell as long as it is living. In other words, healthy protoplasm must always be in direct contact with water. It is only while saturated with water that the active life of protoplasm can exist.

With very rare exceptions, if a cell is once completely dried, even at a low temperature, its life is gone and restoration of water fails to enable it to recover.

The life of a plant is intimately connected with the renewal of the water which its cells contain. Fresh and that which is constantly taken in to a certain extent, be removed, must plant demands, in fact, a kind of circulation of water, and this becomes the more imperative as the growth of the plant increases.

It has been proved that protoplasm, which, as we have seen, is the active substance found in every living cell and that of an animal, draws its nutriment eventually from the water which comes to it.

It has been established that protoplasm must return to this water which produces as it gives off. It must, therefore, for instance, pass from the interior of a cell through the liquid which enters that cell. Thus we see that water, too, is wonderful medium through which to convey the forces of life. It is not difficult to believe, therefore, that the body of a man weighing 160 pounds, made up of more than 100 pounds of water, contains all that water as the result of a fixed law.

Of the solid matter to be found in the human body about one-fifth is made up of the minerals—iron, calcium, phosphorus, potassium, magnesium, sodium, chlorine, sulphur, silicon, fluorine, iodine, and boron.

Chlorides and phosphates with carbonates and sulphates form the chief weight of the mineral salts, as far as weight is concerned, but some of the salts which appear in mere traces, such as fluorine and iodine, have essential functions to perform, and without them there is much evidence to support the assertion that human life could not exist.

One of humanity's most conspicuous sins of omission or neglect has been a failure to properly consider the majesty, the dignity, the complexity of the human body, which, considered apart from the human soul, is the most majestic work of creation. Let us for an instant examine a little detail of that majestic creation.

If we put a trace of blood under the microscope an astonishing picture is witnessed. Hundreds of little corpuscles are seen swimming about. Most of them are red, but a considerable number are white.

A single drop of blood contains so many millions of corpuscles, far more than all the visible stars in the sky, that less than a hundredth part of a drop, the merest trace, must be used in the field under the objective in order that we may see anything at all.

The red and white corpuscles alone are sufficient to confound all the wisdom of the world, but they are not the only things discovered in that fragment of blood.

In addition to them we find the salts that we have seen, such as iron, calcium, phosphorus, sodium, potassium, magnesium, sulphur, chlorine, and many other compounds which we shall not consider here.

These substances are always found when pure and normal blood is examined, so that it is evident that they must get into the blood through some definite channel and in obedience to some well-defined law. It has been established on many occasions by scientific investigators that the red and white corpuscles have a certain well-defined work to do. It is also evident that anything which interferes with their work or keeps them out of the blood is an enemy of life.

To make that involved in a simple solution which we have seen fit to call blood. Nature obtains her building materials from food. Let us examine this fact over again.

We can never attach to it too great an importance. The character of the blood depends upon the character of the food supplied to the digestive organs. What kind of food is supplied to the nearly 400,000 children under ten years of age who die every year in the United States? We shall soon know.

The railroad employees and the office men resulted in a victory for the office men by but a few pines. A number of ladies will give a Leap Year dance Friday night, Feb. 25th, at Drake's Hall. It is a select affair.

F. W. McKinney went to Chicago Tuesday afternoon, returning Wednesday night. Rev. Duxstad, white in Beloit with his father yesterday afternoon, had a very narrow escape from a serious injury. He started to cross the street when a horse hitched to a buggy gave a lunge and struck Revard, knocking him to the ground and rolling him along in the dirt and water. He was immediately taken to a physician's office, where it was found he had only a few bruises. Bystanders expected to see the horse step on him and it is little short of miraculous that Revard is recovering from a very severe case of pneumonia and has only days to be out of door a few days.

J. R. Switzer was in Elkhorn today. T. A. Hutson went to Chicago Tuesday and drove a new automobile back. McKinney accompanied him back and will return to Chicago today.

Orfordville News

Orfordville, Feb. 17.—Ethel Compton is somewhat under the weather and confined to her bed.

The W. O. W. dance held at the opera house Tuesday evening was well attended and greatly enjoyed by all. Supper was served in the spacious dining hall at the new Odd Fellows' building.

A class of six candidates were introduced to the mysteries of Odd Fellowship at the last meeting. The order is in a flourishing condition and there is scarcely a meeting where their numbers are not augmented.

The congregation of the Luther Valley church have recently installed a gas lighting plant at their church. The building is now splendidly lighted to meet the ever increasing demand for a suitable place for the young people of the community to meet and spend their evenings.

The local basketball team will meet the team from the Albion academy at the opera house in Orfordville on the afternoon of the 19th. This will doubtless be a lively game. The Orfordville boys recently won the state high school team of Brodhead, and this may be responsible for their increased confidence in their ability as basketball players.

The Borden man was in the village again on Wednesday looking after their interests. The farmers seem to be taking kindly to their business methods and the supply of milk that they receive from here seems to be increasing.

The societies of the two churches known as the East and West churches connected with the Luther Valley church will hold an all day social event at the East church on Washington's birthday. Dinner and supper will be served by the ladies of the society and a program will be rendered in the afternoon.

These remarkable boilers are eliminating the Smoke Evil in over 400 smoke-plagued cities and towns where they heat largest apartments, churches, stores, business blocks, schools, public and private institutions. The IDEAL double grate method of burning makes possible the use of the cheaper highly volatile soft coals. The result is 100% available heat—and a smokeless chimney!

The savings shown from owners' coal bills are from 20% to 50%! All fuel waste is stopped! All the rich heat-producing gases are completely burned with full heat production before Smoke has any chance to form. Can be installed in any old or new building because made of cast-iron sections easily carried through doorways. Never wear out or corrode, nor do they require expensive soon-crumbling brick covering as do old-fashioned steel plate and tube boilers.

Let us show you these Boilers in operation. Let us prove what we say by submitting data of results and owners' coal bills. Let us refer you to your City Smoke Inspectors who know the efficient work of IDEAL SMOKELESS Down Draft Boilers in keeping the city smokeless. COST OF LIVING.

The woes of the householder multiply. One advance in cost is followed by another. One of the latest is the announcement that wall paper, due to scarcity of German dyes, has gone up in price from 25 to 30 per cent. The dark papers have advanced most, while the lighter styles are not so much affected.

The time has gone by, however, when the cost of wall paper was the principal item in interior decoration. Labor has gone up so much of recent years that an advance in the cost of the paper has become a secondary item.

This added expense of interior renovation is keenly felt by the housewife. Occasional applications of clean, new paper add greatly to the attractiveness of a home. These are days of dirt and dust and smoke, and wall paper does not wear clean the way it used to. The papers our grandfathers put on would often last a great many years, and seem fresh and neat even then. Today every whirling automobile sends its deposit of dirt, every railroad train or factory chimney has its contribution of soot. Light colored papers will look dingy in a very few years.

This item of household expense can be much kept down by using dark colored papers, though as noted above these are the most expensive now. But it costs no more for the paste brush artist who puts them on. Many housewives object to dark papers, on the ground that they make rooms look smaller, and if a house is not well lighted they diffuse an atmosphere of gloom. But they are the only shades that can be depended on to wear in these times.

In spite of these extra costs the paper hangers keep busy most of the time. As in all other departments of domestic life, the people find the price for it somehow. The landlord charges it up with his rent, and the public groans and pays the bill.

THE TARIFF BOARD.

After backing and filling over and over again on the subject of a tariff board, after telling the country in his Indianapolis speech that such a board would be superfluous because the trade commission was authorized to do just that work, President Wilson has now urged congress to authorize him to appoint a tariff board, and the recommendation meets with general approval. The most serious obstacle to a useful tariff board appointed by President Wilson is the fact that he has shown himself incapable of appointing a non-partisan board, and consequently in violating the spirit of the law which it requires him to name a member of the opposing party. For the federal reserve board, which of all instrumentalities of the government should be most free from politics and political influences, Mr. Wilson named five democrats, besides forcing on it, as ex-officio members, two violent partisans, his son-in-law, Mr. McAdoo, and John Skelton Williams, controller of the currency, and this against the best judgment of the very democrats who framed the federal reserve. One of his democratic appointees was so objectionable to the senate that he withdrew his name and substituted that of a republican, Mr. Delano, but even at that the board stands one republican to six democrats. On the civil service and the federal trade commissions, where the law required non-partisan appointments, Mr. Wilson violated the spirit of the law by naming progressives. Not for many years has there been witnessed in the white house such intense partisanship.

FOODS.

Under this caption the Gazette is publishing a series of articles by Alfred W. McCann of New York. Mr. McCann is a writer of much experience in the food values of different products and what he says is the result of careful investigation and well worth considering.

This series of articles has caused an unusual amount of comment and is a valuable asset to the general knowledge of the average reader who pays but passing attention to the relative merits of certain foods as builders of brain and brawn.

To the housewife they should prove invaluable and so frequent have become the letters of commendation of the articles in question that it is thought best to call particular attention to them so all may read and be benefited.

They appear in each Monday, Wednesday and Friday's papers and are so marked that they can not fail to be found. Mr. McCann, the author, has worked wonders by his crusade for pure food products in the east and is now making a nation-wide campaign in the same interests in which the Gazette is most glad to play its part.

WAGES ADVANCE.

The past six weeks has seen a remarkable number of announcements of advanced wages in factories, mills and other industries.

It would be an interesting study in human nature to trace the destination of this extra money. Some of it will go for more picture shows, tawdry ornaments for the parlor table, candy, tobacco, and liquor. There is plenty of folly in the world, and it is hard to say whether there is more of it among the poor or among the rich.

In the main of course an advance in wages is applied to real needs, to clothing, to substantial food, etc.

The ambitious common sense working man should not be satisfied, however, unless he has done something with it to give him a more assured position in life. A substantial part of every wage raise ought to go to the payment of debts and if possible to a bank deposit. The sun shines today, but periods of business depression are bound to recur.

PAY UP WEEK.

Pay up week comes next. It means that if the plans are carried out more money will be put in actual circulation, general conditions bettered and credit restored. It is a laudable effort and should receive the support of citizens generally. Remember that Pay Up week is not merely a Rock county institution, but nation-wide, and consequently its effect will be far-reaching.

"My dear sir, have you had your lunch?" beamed the salesman.

"Why, no," said the salesman, and they repaired to Beanery's entry, the most expensive place in town.

After the two had consumed a repast of Philadelphia scrapple, Denver sage pudding, San Francisco honey comb cutlets, Springfield fritters and Mrs. Jones' rhubarb pie, they each ordered a quart of champagne, and the auto salesman footed a dinner bill of $23.50.

"Now we'll talk autos," he said. Felix Spatter waved his hand.

"I won't insist on all those provisions now," he said, "I'll wait."

"They're only things I've heard people talk about, anyway, and I don't know the first thing about 'em. All I'll do is not pay my original intention of not paying me $240 for a car."

Excusing himself, the auto salesman reached under the champagne, picked up one of the empty champagne bottles and sent it tinkling musically into a million pieces against Felix Spatter's solid ivory head.

"Our friend, Harry Townsend, is celebrating the arrival of a fine boy at his home. The new-come is the very image of his father. It is one of the large cornfield variety, with huge lumps all over it, and weighs 45 pounds."

REVIVE HOPES FOR INTERURBAN AGAIN?

Madison Newspaper States Wisconsin Interurban System Is About to Begin Construction of Road.

Another of the newspaper interurbans between Janesville and Madison is about to be built. According to the Madison Democrat J. E. Jones, president of the Wisconsin Interurban system, accompanied by J. E. Sawhill of Chicago, in charge of the financial department of the new interurban system, arrived in Madison yesterday from the east to make preparation for starting work upon the new line which will run from Janesville across the city on Washington avenue, from Madison to Janesville, from Madison to Portage and from Madison to Prairie du Sac.

Madison will ask for a bond issue of approximately $4,000,000 to build, electrically and properly equip the new lines of about 112 miles of track. The Fort Dearborn Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago will act as trustee under the bond issue.

The bond issue will be taken by the syndicate under the direction of the syndicate managers, all provide.

The James Stewart & Co., incorporated, of New York, has entered into a signed contract with the company to build, equip and furnish all necessary material entering into the construction of the road.

Stewart & Co. is the largest construction company in the world and is rated the highest standing. Certainly they will subcontract much of the work, but to have that company behind a proposition of this character and responsible for proper construction means much to the new enterprise.

Counselman & Co. of Chicago, who is manager of the bond syndicate, is of high standing in the financial world with the meritorious proposition like the proposed lines, coupled with the push of the managers of the undertaking, makes the interurban proposition, which has long been discussed in Madison, look very near like realization.

Said Will Start Work Early.

Said Mr. Jones, "Work will begin right here in Madison as soon as weather conditions will permit. Our force began work today to complete preliminary arrangements necessary to carry out the results. There seems to be no chance now for further delay."

by the court because Lawrence was drunk while on duty at the crossing yesterday morning. The condition of the men was reported to the police department and when a patrolman went to investigate Lawrence had gone up into the slanty and laid across the trap to prevent the officer arresting him. After a vain attempt to push up the trap door, the officer did a few stunts in steeple climbing and with the aid of a ladder, managed to crawl through the slanty window into the small room.

In court Lawrence pleaded guilty and was sentenced after receiving a most searching lecture by the court.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME ...

Copyright 1915 by Frank H. Spearman.

Shaking herself like a duck, and without losing a minute, Helen spread the wet blue print out on the deck, broke the motor lock on the ignition switch, and turned the engine over. She knew the motor well; it was a powerful Loew Victor, and after her second effort it hummed like a dynamo. While it was warming up she cut the mooring line. Seagrue easily suspected she meant to get to Rhineland at Oceanside. He looked at his watch. If he could catch the limited he could still reach the city ahead of her. Exasperated, and out of breath, he hastened back to camp, routed out his chauffeur and took his racing car for the station. Hardly a minute was left to him, and his hope of reaching a point where he could flag the through train vanished when he heard its whistle and saw the gleam of its headlight coming down the signal grade.

But he would not give up. Urging his man to speed, he gained the highway paralleling the railroad track, and as the limited shot by, Seagrue, with all the power that could be got out of his motor, actually held for a time abreast of it. He yelled and shouted as one sleeper after another drew slowly past—both the train and the motor car were running very fast—but he could attract no attention. Helpless with rage, he saw the last car pulling gradually past, and furious at being balked, he stood up on the seat and as the car drew past him, he jumped over the rail and landed on the observation platform.

Helen was pushing the launch toward Oceanside. The ocean below the bay laps almost the edge of the railroad track, but her heart sank as she looked back and saw the night train tearing up the track and rapidly overhauling her. Instinct told her that Seagrue would somehow board that train in an effort to get to the city first. As the engine drew nearer, she picked up a pair of glasses and leveling them on the cab, discovered George Storm on the right side. She waved a signal flag at him, but his eyes were glued on the track ahead. Then, as if by an inspiration, she seized the cord of the air whistle at her hand and in the Morse code signalled for help. Storm turned his head and looked back questioning along his train; then up at his own whistle. The whistling continued, and his attention was finally drawn to the launch, now dropping behind the train. Helen caught up her signal flag again. In a flash he recognized her, and calling his fireman over they listened to her appeal.

"Give me paper, pencil," shouted Storm, as he shut off the throttle and listened to the long and short toots that re-echoed in jerky succession from the surface of the sea against the towering cliffs and through the flying cab. On a leaf, torn from a pad, Storm scratched out the signals:

"Have survey. Seagrue on your train. Delay so I can reach Oceanside first."

"HELEN!"

The engine whistle shrieked his answer to her eager ears.

"Something wrong with engine at ready."

The fireman, learning the truth from Storm, tried to persuade him, whatever happened, not to delay the train. It would cost Storm, he urged, his job.

"What's the job to me?" demanded Storm, applying the air and bringing up the train with a jolt. So saying, he snatched a small handful of tools from the box and prepared to get down.

Seagrue had made his way into the coach. He summoned the conductor, and being known was accorded every courtesy. But the race was now first on his mind, and when he heard the brakes grinding, and running back on the platform saw fire screaming from the wheels, he called the conductor, demanding to know the cause of the stop. Going forward together for an explanation, the two men found Storm under his engine with wrench and hammer, while in the distance Seagrue could see the Spiderwater cutting the waves like foaming glass and slipping away to where a stormy directors' meeting was in session at Oceanside, and Rhineland was in the fight of his life to prevent summary action being taken to stop the cut-off work. In vain he showed Helen's telegram, which had come in time to rescue him from complete defeat. But Seagrue's henchman, Capelle, conniving with the disaffected element in the directorate, was pushing to a vote with every prospect of success the resolution to stop work.

"What have we got to go on?" he demanded, facing Rhineland down.

"You know as well as I do we are throwing hundreds of thousands into a project absolutely uncertain. You offer a telegram. What good is the telegram? Where can Helen Holmes get a survey at an hour's notice that would justify us in keeping on?"

CLOSING OF "HEART THROBS" CAMPAIGN.

We announce, with regret, the closing of our wonderful campaign in distributing the greatest two books that have ever been published—"Heart Throbs." We have only copies enough on hand to satisfy those of our readers who bring their coupons for the remaining few days. The advertisements that have been running in these pages for several weeks past have fully described the merits of the books, and the daily readers in English and American literature. We are more than gratified at the response from the public, and are sanguine that through this enormous distribution a large number of these remarkable books will be felt for years in this community. Attention is called to the advertisements that may appear in our columns for the brief remaining period. The coupon offer will be published daily.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

"At the Rainbow's End," released Feb. 22, Carol McComas makes her first appearance in motion pictures. Miss McComas has long been sought by leading companies, but her busy life in successes on the stage always prevented. Her vivacious personality, beautiful brown eyes and a certain captivating manner make her an ideal subject for the camera, and should the lens catch but one-half of her charming sprightliness, her success will be pronounced. Besides her natural vivacity, her next most marked characteristic is her remarkable versatility, which has enabled her to succeed equally well in dramatic roles as she did in musical comedy and in vaudeville as a whistler and singer.

GAUMONT PREPARING NEW MASTERPIECE

The new masterpiece, "I Accuse," is well under way at the winter quarters at Jacksonville, Fla., under the direction of William F. Haddock. It was written by Miss Marjorie Howe and the picture version prepared by scenario editor, George D. Webster. Alexander Gaden, seconded by Miss Gertrude Robinson, has the leading role. It will be released Feb. 24.

Supporting the stars in "I Accuse" are V. J. Butler, Henry W. Pemberton and John Reinhard. Butler takes the part of a minister with an unkindly temper, and Mr. Gaden appears as the judge who must sentence him to prison despite the fact that it is to the minister's daughter he has given his heart.

Lillian Drew, leading woman, is a strict vegetarian. Miss Drew decided to try out the vegetarian theory several years ago, and after practicing it for a few months she felt better physically than ever before in her life. She says a vegetable diet guarantees a beautiful complexion.

Edward Jose, who is supporting "Nippling" Light in "The Filled," expects shortly to take a large commission.

DOUBTS LA FOLLETTE WILL BE AT BANQUET

Considered Highly Improbable That Senator Will Return from Washington.—McGovern Won't Be There.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Madison, Wis., Feb. 18.—Although those in charge of the La Follette convention, which is being called a dinner out of courtesy, claim that it is going to be successful from every standpoint, the recent statement that Francis E. McGovern will not attend and other happenings have not pleased the powers that be in progressive circles. The statement is continually made that Senator La Follette is to attend, unless business in the senate prevents. The fact is that those close to the senator do not expect him. If he comes it will be because his followers realize that his absence would be a body blow and are able to make the senator see it that way.

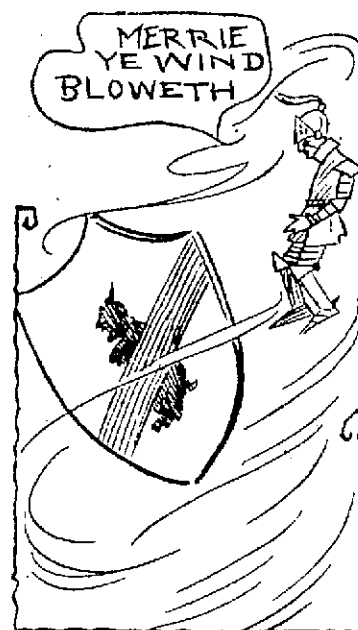

Although the tip by this writer that the La Follette tour was not considered a success was laughed at by the "progressive" papers, it was a fact and no one connected with Wisconsin knows this more than does the senator himself. Word comes from his offices here that he has decided that he had better stay in Washington for the time being, and there he will stay. Without his presence, however, the convention or dinner, whatever you wish to call it, will be a frost. That is certain. He may save the day. Incidentally, the senator has not increased his following among Wisconsin republicans by his vote on the Philippine bill. The fact that he remained in the state until he did, and then rushed to Washington to vote for this bill with the democrats, does not prove that he is a republican any more than his vote for the Underwood tariff bill did.

Feline Agility.

A cat can turn completely over and land on its paws in a fall of fifteen inches.

Quick results—that's everybody's experience with want ads.

AUTO KINKS.

What part of an auto?

Jones' argument regarding his desire to make a pitcher of Sisler is based on his belief that a good hurler is of more value to a club than many 300 hitters. "Of course, if Sisler should hit 340, prove an excellent base runner and handle himself well in the field, I would not want to keep him out of the regular line-up," says Jones. "It often occurs, however, that a 275 hitter is of more value to a club than a man who bats from twenty-five to fifty points more. I'll have to look over Sisler before definitely deciding where to use him. But if he's a good pitcher, he'll pitch."

A word to the wise—to those who advertise. Use want ads every day; our word for it, they'll surely pay.

EMMY WEHLEN IN STIRRING FEATURE

Pretty Metro Star Heads Cast in "Her Reckoning" or "Tables Turned" at the Majestic.

Miss Emmy Wehlen was called upon to display all manner of emotion in the photoplay in which she was seen yesterday at the Majestic theatre. By her unusual attractive appearance she stirs up much sincere sympathy with her audience in her acting in this piece and makes the characterization of the misled wife indeed a delicate touch to the stirring melodrama. "Her Reckoning" or "Tables Turned" as the picture may be called, contains many plausible situations, a well developed plot, and is sprinkled with many tense moments. The scenes at the college dance and the pictures acted at the cabaret are strikingly gorgeous.

Emmy Wehlen will star in this Metro feature again this evening at the Majestic.

SEED CORN SITUATION CRITICAL

By P. G. Holden, Who Spoke Before the Twilight Club at Their January Meeting.

There will be a short crop this year and millions of dollars lost to the Corn Belt farmers, if great care is not taken in selecting and testing the best matured corn for this season's planting.

No matter whether you are going to use seed from your 1914 crop or not—test it just the same. It may have become damaged by the frost during the cold freezes of last year.

A cold, wet season has retarded the growth of corn. This year's crop in many parts of the Corn Belt is immature, contains an excessive amount of water, and is unfit for seed. Scarcity of seed corn is the most serious in many years.

There are about 800 kernels on the average ear of corn, and one poor seed ear means 800 weak, dead or moldy kernels which, if planted, mean missing hills and weak stalks producing little or nothing. We cannot afford to take any chances. We must get our heads in the game. Every banker, merchant, implement dealer, farmer, teacher, and preacher must get busy.

Start a seed campaign in your community. Every county superintendent of schools can reach the farmers in his county through the teachers of rural schools, who will in turn see the school children carry the message home. Bankers, merchants, and implement dealers can write personal letters carrying special seed corn literature to their patrons. Have the editors of the county papers published seed corn articles. There is no time to lose.

Every indication points to very serious trouble with seed corn, especially in sections lying north of central Illinois throughout the Corn Belt, and in North Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan and Iowa.

To meet these unusual conditions, a great many farmers are depending upon the 1914 crop for their seed, but this is unsafe. The high price of corn on account of the war has nearly exhausted the 1914 crop, and this source of supply is not reliable. We cannot afford to run any risk.

FARMERS, BANKERS, MERCHANTS, TEACHERS, PUBLISHERS—EVERYBODY SHOULD HELP—GET BUSY NOW.

We must not use poor seed (started before putting in the cellar, and spring. It means too much to us. It must not be corded up or put in poor seed means not only a poor crop, but hung up. Stand and a portion of the field idle. That is the only good business to know but that we must cultivate the mind that the seed that we put into the ground will grow; and the only way we can tell good seed is by testing it. We can't tell by merely looking at it.

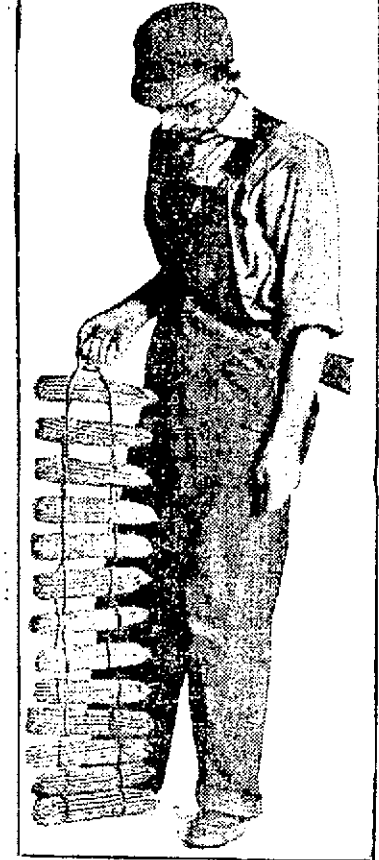

Fig. 1. Corn Ready to Hang Up. The String Contains From Twelve to Fifteen Ears Each.

poor, worthless stalks, and receive nothing in return. Thousands of people every year work more than a third of every day on ground that produces nothing. Do not depend on seed on the occasional good ears selected during the husking period. The corn will be injured by freezing before it is husked or before it has had time to become dry after husking.

Select the best ears, if you have not already done so, and string them on binder twine (see Fig. 1), and hang up.

Do not store seed corn in barrels or boxes. It will "gather moisture" and mold or freeze. Do not store over the laundry or over the stable. Do not put immature or freshly gathered seed corn in a warm room, on the floor, or in piles. It will either sprout, or mold, or both. It should be hung up at once, and the windows opened to allow the freest circulation of air. Do not depend on the crib for seed corn.

One day devoted to the seed corn, at the proper time, may be worth more than an entire month of hard work next summer put on a poor stand of corn.

Hang Up Seed Corn Like This. The attic is a good place to hang up the seed corn. There should be a circulation of air through the room. A space three by eight feet will hold 200 strings of corn, twelve to fifteen ears to each string, or about enough to plant 200 acres. Three-fourths of this corn may be discarded after testing, but there will still be enough seed to plant fifty acres, more than the average acreage on each farm. There are several objections to the average cellar. It is apt to be too damp, and the corn must be well

Fig. 3. Selecting the Ears. Do You Know That Your Seed Corn Will Grow? Test—Don't Guess.

If we want profitable yields, we must plant good seed. The ten million acres of corn planted in Iowa every year are grown on 217,000 farms, an average of about forty-six acres to each farm. It will take about 600 ears to plant forty acres. Twenty-four hours' time or one man, two days' work, will test six kernels from each ear to plant forty acres. Yet, because it is "too much bother," we pick out 600 ears, look at them, guess that they will grow, and plant them. As a consequence, more than twelve acres out of each forty-acres of corn planted in Iowa produce, because we must plow, plant, and cultivate these twelve acres and get nothing in return.

By testing we get rid of the bad, weak, and moldy ears. Testing does not hurt the corn. It costs but about ten cents an acre, and can be done at a time of the year when other farm work is not pressing. By testing we have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Discard the Poor Ears Before Testing. In the winter, during a slack season or in the early spring, from February 20 to March 20 select the best ears from the corn you have stored in the fall and get ready to put them through the test. (See Fig. 3).

The sawdust germination box is no doubt the best method for testing seed corn. It costs nothing but a little time and labor. It furnishes nearly natural conditions. It is not essential that the box be of any particular size, although about thirty inches square and four or five inches deep will be found convenient. This size will test 100 ears at a time.

The sawdust is light, clean, and easy to get and handle in February and the first of March, when the testing should be done; is a good nonconductor of heat and cold, so that the temperature is kept even during germination, and holds the moisture so perfectly that there is no danger of drying out.

The number of boxes required will depend upon the amount of seed to be tested and the time limit. After the germination boxes are made,

How to Test Seed Corn With the Fig. 6. Tacking the Cloth Over Sawdust.

Inspect carefully the ears you are to test from the standpoint of the kernel.

Inspect the Ears Before Testing. Take two or three kernels from each ear, about a third of the length of the ear from the butt. Lay them germ-side up at the tip of the ear from which they were taken. If the kernels are small, wedge-shaped, narrow, shallow, too deep, or if they show immaturity, starchiness, a tendency to mold, or if the germs are small, or shriveled, discard the ear.

Remove six kernels from six different places on each ear you have selected to test, taking two from near the butt on the opposite sides of the ear, two from near the tip, turning the ear enough so as not to take two kernels out of the same row. Sawdust Germination Box.

Fill the box about half full of moist sawdust, well pressed down, so as to leave a smooth, even surface. (See Fig. 5). The sawdust should be put in a gunnysack and set in a tub of warm water for at least an hour (or still better, over night) so that it will be thoroughly moistened before using. Rule off a piece of good quality white cloth (cheesecloth), about the size of the box, into squares, checker-board fashion, two and one-half inches each way. Number the squares 1, 2, 3, etc. Place the cloth on the sawdust and

Fig. 7. Placing a Cloth Over Kernels. Careful not to displace the kernels in tacking it to the box at the corners and edges. (See Fig. 6.)

Use care that the kernels do not get mixed with those from the ear next to it. After the kernels are removed, boards may be laid over the rows of ears to keep them in place until the result of the germination test is known. Place the six kernels from ear No. 1 in square No. 1 of the germination box; from ear No. 2 in square No. 2, and so on with all the ears. Lay a piece of good cloth (a good quality of cheesecloth) on top of the kernels and dampen it. (See Fig. 7.) Press the cloth down gently with the palm of the hand, being careful not to displace the kernels in tacking it to the box at the corners and edges. (See Fig. 6.)

Now place over this cloth another cloth of the same material, considerably larger than the first one (about six feet square), and fill in on top with two or three inches of moist, warm sawdust. (See Fig. 8.) Pack the box firmly with a brick, or with the feet as in Fig. 9. The edges of the cover should then be folded over the sawdust in the box to prevent drying out. Now set the box away until the kernels sprout. Keep in an ordinary warm place, like the living room, where it will not freeze. The kernels will germinate in about eight days.

Remove the cover carefully to avoid displacing the kernels in the squares. Examine the kernels in each square in the germination box, and discard all ears whose kernels in the box are dead, moldy, or show weak germination.

If the kernels show weak, spindling sprouts, or a part of them are very weak and uneven, the ear should be

Fig. 9. Packing Down the Sawdust. thrown out to make place for an ear whose kernels give strong, vigorous sprouts. Remember that the kernels which are slow to sprout, and are weak, will be behind the strong ones in the field.

How to Read the Test. Ears No. 2, 11, 13, and 24, shown in Fig. 11, should be discarded. Ears No. 1, 3, 12, and 22 are strong. Save out ears like these for the best 100 ears, provided they are good in other respects. Ears may have life as in the case of No. 2, but when the kernels fall into the hills with others, like No. 12 and 22, they are deprived of food and light and give stalks with little or no grain, and they produce pollen to scatter over the field to propagate their kind. Ear No. 2 is one of the kind that fools us, when we attempt to judge by the eye and jackknife method. Ear No. 2 was planted by the side of No. 12, but yielded less than half the corn in the fall.

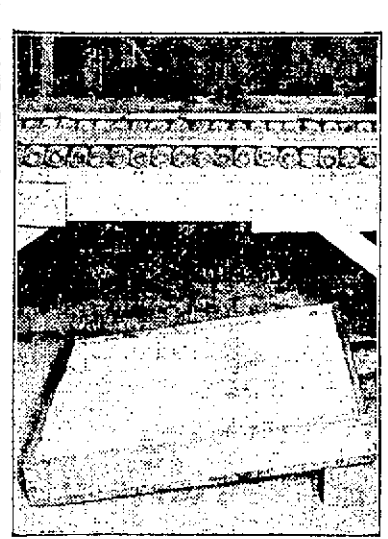

Fig. 10.

If we buy the germination boxes and the cloth and hire for work done, it will not cost to exceed sixteen cents per acre to test every ear for seed. But this work can be done very well by hand.

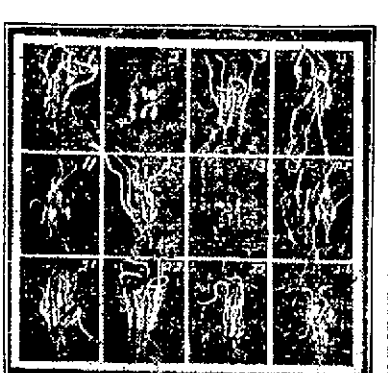

Fig. 11. Reading the Test.

After the seed has been sorted, tested, shelled, and graded for the planter, and the bad kernels removed, it should be placed in half-bushel sacks and hung up in a dry place. Put in sacks, separate from the rest.

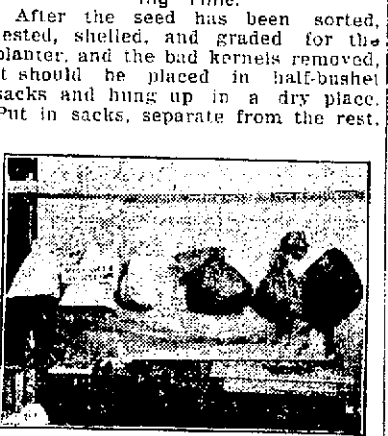

Fig. 12.

the seed from the best 100 ears. When planting, use the seed from "the best 100 ears" on one side of the field from which to pick your seed corn for the next year's planting.

We cannot afford to neglect this important work. If every farmer would test every ear of his seed corn in the winter in the way described above, the yield would be wonderfully increased. No other time will be so profitable to the farmer as that spent in testing the vitality of his seed and in grading to insure the planter dropping the proper number of kernels in each hill. It is possible for everyone to do this work. It will cost nothing but the time, of which there is plenty at the season when the work should be done. Every farmer should realize the importance of testing every ear of his seed corn before spring work begins.

The first step concerns the planter. (Fig. 13.) Standard planters have plates adapted to different sizes of kernels. With seed corn graded to a uniform size, it is easy to select a plate with holes to fit the kernels, eliminating the danger of cracked corn and insuring a uniform drop.

JOE THE BOOK FARMER

MAKING GOOD ON THE LAND

By GARRARD HARRIS

COPYRIGHT, 1915, BY HANSEN & BROTHERS.

CHAPTER XIV.

Women Are Interested.

"M. A. do you know anything about canning stuff?" asked Joe after full justice had been done to the savory squirrel pie and well baked turkey hen, both of which Joe had provided. "Powerful little son. Why?"

"Well, if I had a chance to learn would you?"

"Of course, if I had a canning outfit and something to can."

"All right. Wait a minute." Joe left the table and returned with a pamphlet out of a bundle of several the mail carrier had left that morning.

"Here it is, one of the government bulletins. Gives you the whole thing right here. If you'll just study this until you get it fixed in your mind I'll buy you a nice canning outfit."

"That would be mighty nice and a big help next winter to have plenty of canned huckleberries and blackberries and plums and peaches and things to make pies of. We'd be high!"

"I'm going to plant a lot of tomatoes and snap beans. Those that ain't fancy enough to sell you and sister Annie can pick and put them up. There'll be plenty of them."

"I'll bet you could make some money on 'em, wife," suggested Mr. Weston. "I know what they pay for canned tomatoes wholesale."

"How much, pa?" inquired Mrs. Weston.

"They pay the wholesale grocers 80 cents a dozen and retail at 10 cents a can—$1.20 a dozen."

"What do the cans and all cost to put 'em up?" persisted Mrs. Weston.

"I don't know, except from the report of the Girls' Tomato club work. It says there that the cans and labels cost about a cent and three-quarters each and estimate cost of tomatoes and labor for each can at a cent."

Mrs. Weston did some mental arithmetic.

"Even then there's a fair profit in it. The person who grows the tomatoes and puts 'em up gets the cent. Really, the cost is a cent and three-quarters a can, ain't it?"

Her husband nodded.

"I'll bet you could sell many a dozen to boarding houses and hotels in town at a dollar a dozen. It would mean an additional profit of 20 cents for you and a saving of 20 cents for them over what they'd have to pay retail," suggested Joe.

"It looks pretty good," announced Mrs. Weston. "You get me that canning outfit, and I'll make a try at it."

"All right. If I win that scholarship I won't be here next spring, ma, and you can have my prize corn acre to raise tomatoes on, and it won't cost you a cent for fertilizer. It will be plenty rich. You ought to clean up a pretty nice pile."

"All my life I've wanted some way to make some money of my own," said Mrs. Weston. "Now I see the way, and I'm going to follow it. You men needn't think you are the only money makers. Just watch Annie and me with my chickens and canning outfit!"

"Tell you another scheme, ma. I'll set aside three nice spring pigs. You and Annie fatten 'em up and turn 'em into that fine smoked sausage pext winter. I'll bet you can make a lot on that too."

"Well, that's a fine plan! Never thought of it. And I heard Miss Allen in town complain' that she couldn't get her pork sausage from the butchers any more—they filled it up with beef scraps!" enthused Mrs. Weston. "Well, try that too."

"Isn't a bit of reason in the world why all the canned fruit and vegetables farmers buy out of stores shouldn't be put up on the farms. Save a heap of money," reflected Joe.

"Stid of that," chuckled Mr. Weston, "I see these here triflin' farmers a-burin' canned tomatoes an' corn an' such an' banilin' it out where it ought to grow n' be saved."

"I know where there's a big pile of tomato cans behind the barn," announced Annie proudly, trying to get into the drift of the conversation. The whole family exploded into a laugh.

"I'm guilty, sis!" chuckled her father. "Just as guilty as any of the rest of 'em, but I was sort of hopin' nobody would throw it up to me."

"We won't do it any more," assured Mrs. Weston. "You get me that canning outfit and I'll start practicin' on early vegetables—peas, beans and such. Then by the time tomatoes are ripe I'll be ready too. Can we afford it, though? Those canning outfits are dreadful expensive, ain't they?" she asked with some apprehension.

"Oh, I don't know!" replied Joe easily. "The one the Girls' Tomato clubs use, tested and recommended by the experts of the agricultural department, costs about $3.50, and the cans and labels a cent and three-quarters—maybe about a cent and a half if the label is not counted."

"My goodness! I thought a canning outfit would cost $20 or $25 or $50 or some such awful price!" she exclaimed with relief.

"I had no idea they were that cheap myself," said Mr. Weston. "And with 'em as easy to get as that, just to think of the stuff that goes to waste around these farms that could be saved."

"Why, a canning outfit will save the average family like ours over $100 a winter easy," calculated Mrs. Weston.

"And that is not counting in how much better folks can live. Just think of huckleberry pies in midwinter, blackberries, straw-berries, plenty of corn and tomatoes, beans, peas—why we will live like princes!" mused Joe.

"Joe, you are a darling," said Annie shaking his hand warmly.

"It looks to me," said Mr. Weston, "like there ain't no excuse whatever for a farmer to live like we did afore Joe got this corn club notion in his head."

"No, there ain't any excuse except right down ignorance and stubbornness," assented his wife.

"I reckon if Joe hadn't made that showin' right under my nose we'd 'a' been livin' just like a lot of slaves as we had been doin'—in debt, ownin' nothin' an' owin' everything," the head of the family continued. "Look at us, now—we gettin' to be a pretty fair book farmer, knowin' the why an' wherefore o' things, payin' for land (that'll be ours before this year ends) and in a fair way to be tolerable well off by the time I'm old!"

The work of hauling and dumping went forward steadily, and when night came seventeen loads had been hauled and placed on the acre.

Joe figured that he saved at least two days' time by the loose bottom method of dumping the loads. The work of hauling was completed on the third day—forty-six loads in all—and every bit went on the corn acre. Then the young ones and the fertilizer were turned under. The ground was already mellow and full of vegetable matter.

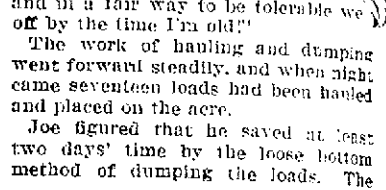

Fig. 16.

"Joe, you are a darling!" said Annie, shaking his hand warmly.

"In one more year this will be the best piece of land in the whole county," remarked Joe. "It will make a hundred bushels of corn and maybe more next year, without another pound of barnyard fertilizer or an ounce of commercial stuff."

Link and Mrs. Weston and Annie had busied themselves cutting up the Irish potatoes for the seed to plant, being careful to leave at least two "eyes," from which the sprouts would come, on each piece of potato. It was a tremendous job. Joe occupied the next day sweeping up leaves in the grove, packing them across the road in sacks to spread in the rows. After the potato cutting was under way and the end in sight Link was called into the game and helped with the leaves.

The next day Mr. Weston plowed the acre for the potatoes, turning it under deeply, cross breaking and harrowing. The year's work on the land in turning under stuff had helped it wonderfully.

The rows were then laid off with the bull tongue plow, and Link and Joe commenced dropping the potatoes in after first scattering a liberal quantity of vegetable grower commercial fertilizer in the bottom of the rows. Then the sacks of leaves were taken and the seed potato pieces covered three or four inches deep. One of the horses was hitched to a drag made of a square piece of lumber eight feet long, and which was hitched by a single tree to the horse. Joe stood on the timber and drove the horse at right angles to the rows. It covered the potatoes perfectly and packed the dirt on them and at the same time smoothed the surface of the field.

Link looked on and finally scratched his head reflectively as he remarked, "Dat looks ter me like er funny way ter plant 'aters. I allers seen 'em planted in hills."

"Most folks do that for two reasons—one to keep the water from standing on the seed and rotting them, and the other is to have plenty of loose dirt to keep the seed moist and for the young potatoes to develop in."

"Well, what's de reason o' dis?" "Ever notice an Irish potato plant with a root and young potatoes on it?" "Nossuh."

"Well, I pulled one up and studied it. The young potatoes are formed above the roots which grow from the bottom of the main stem. I put those leaves in there above the part that will be the root to give a loose place for the young potatoes to develop. And it will make the potatoes cleaner and larger."

"Uh huh, I sorter sees." "And if I had planted in high hills I would have had to cultivate with bees, wouldn't I? There's no plow that would do any good, is there on hills most a foot high?"

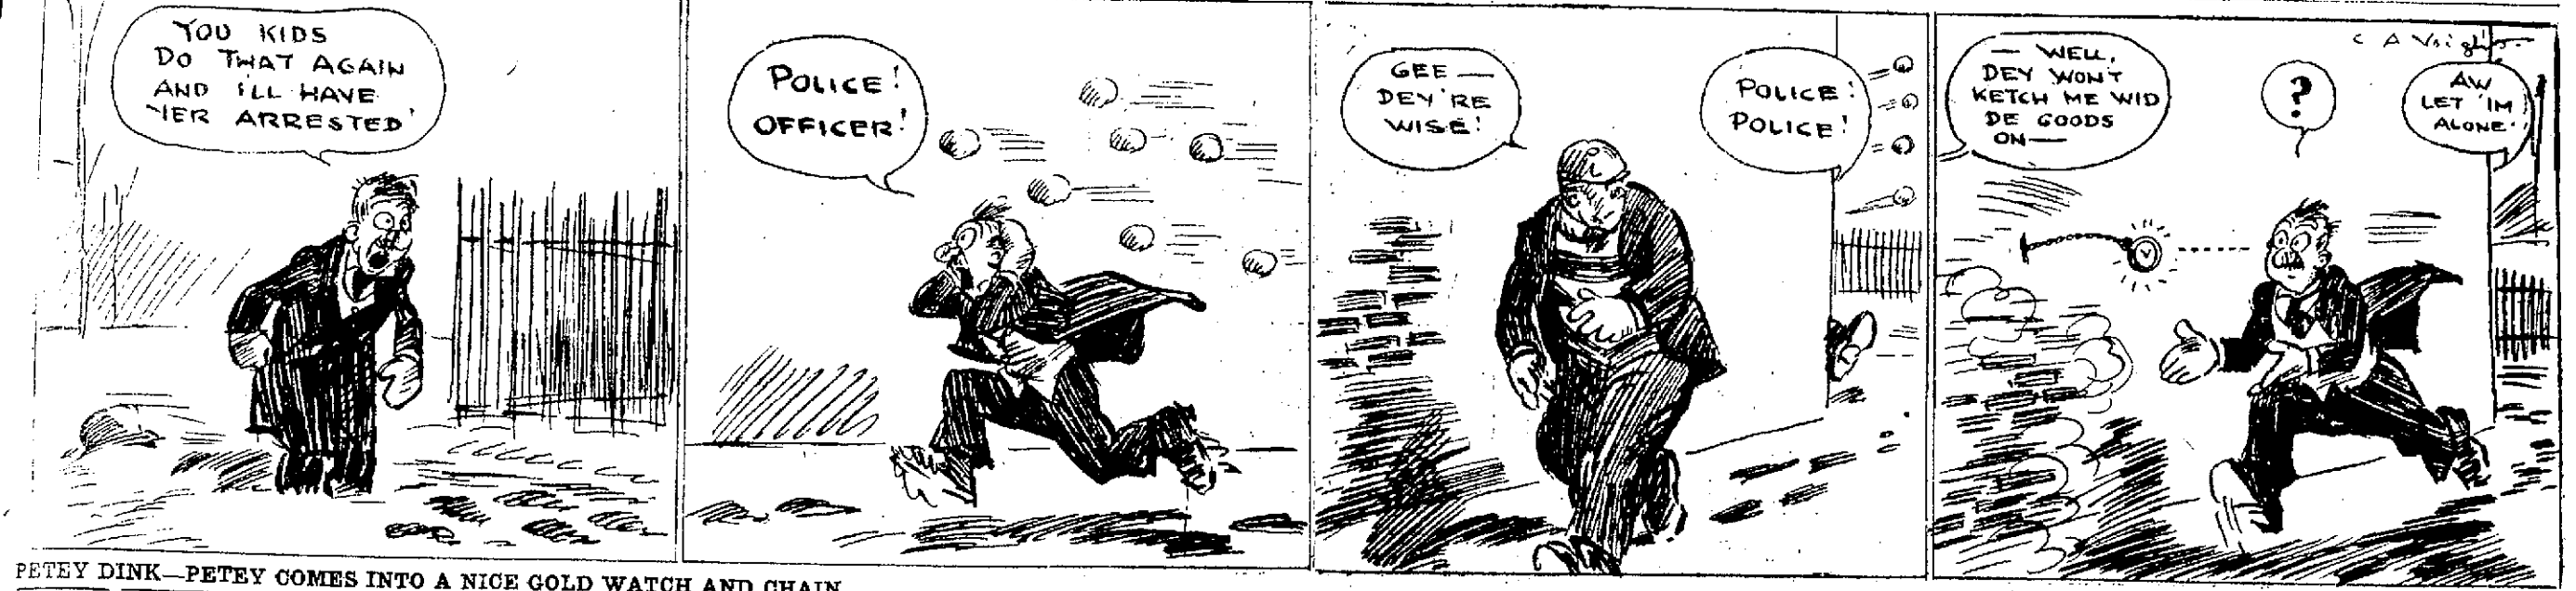

Link shook his head. "So, this way, for the first two workings I'll use a horse and cultivator and get it done in short order. The last working, when the potatoes are forming, I'll run a plow through and throw the dirt on either side right against the potato plants. That will make a hill and give plenty of room for the young potatoes to grow in, won't it?"

"Yeah—an' hit won't be baked by de sun an' hard. It'll be loose at de very time when it's needed loose!" exclaimed the darky.

Why. "Did she turn green with envy?" "No, it wouldn't have harmonized with her general color scheme."—Judge.

CLOSED PARTRIDGE SEASON FAVORED FOR NEXT SEASON

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE) La Crosse, Feb. 18.—A closed season on partridge and a law doubling the fine for violation of the game laws will be advocated at the next meeting of the legislature, according to W. F. Barber, member of the conservation commission. It is proposed that a coupon will be placed on hunting licenses which will be mailed to the conservation commission at the end of the season by the hunter. On this coupon the record of the amount of game killed would be tabulated. Previously the commission has been almost entirely without data as to the amount of game bagged by hunters in Wisconsin each season.

AS GOOD AS A CHEW OF "SPEAR HEAD"

That Means the Supreme Degree of Rich, Luscious Tobacco Flavor

NO OTHER CHEW EQUALS IT

Nature varies the flavor she puts into different grades of tobacco leaf—and the best of all is the flavor of choice red Burley that pleases you so mightily when you chew Spear Head. The delicious fruit flavor of a chew of Spear Head is a revelation to the man who has never chewed or who has been chewing near-good tobacco.

For chewing is the one way to get the wholesome, healthful, appetizing flavor of the tobacco leaf—providing you chew a high-grade plug like Spear Head.

No other tobacco can compare with Spear Head in the wholesome satisfaction it gives.

You get more savory sweetness in a chew of Spear Head than in a whole plug of ordinary tobacco.

And you get it in its purest form—for Spear Head is made amid the most wholesome surroundings, in a clean, new factory that's kept absolutely clean and sanitary.

Try this rich, mellow, satisfying, pure chew. Such a chew cannot be obtained in any other tobacco than Spear Head. In 5c and 10c cuts.

REGULARS LOSE TO JANESVILLE TEAM

First Team Fives From Miller's Alleys Clash Last Night—Other Teams Roll In Games.

But for falling down in the last event the Miller's Regulars would have defeated the Janesville five last night in a match game at the Miller alleys. The Regulars hit a good stride in the first event, striking down 204 pins. In the second game they did not do quite as well and in the last they fell down below the eight hundred mark. Dickerson took the high score honors, rolling 228 on the first shot.

Barbers Win. Leary's Barbers won from the Bostwick team in an exciting contest. Mead of the dry goods team rolled the high score by knocking down 194 pins.

Clerks Win. The Clothing Clerks had an easy time with Scriven's Barbers and swamped them by nearly two hundred pins. Catlin rolled two high games and clinched the honors with scores of 196 and 198. Tonight the Elk fives will bowl and the Janesville K. C. vs. Beloit K. C.

At Y. M. C. A. At the Y. M. C. A. alleys two fives from the Bannison & Lane bakery rolled match games. The single men defeated the married employees by about one hundred pins.

West Side Alleys. The Delivery Boys won a match game from a Willowdale team last night on these alleys. Howland invaded the alleys with the Delivery team and copped high honors with a score of 182. Following are the scores and lineups:

THREE LAKOTAS AID IN TRIMMING CO. E AT FONDY, THURSDAY

Edler, Fletcher and Gray, Along With Young and Gharrity Defeat Crippled Fond du Lac Five Last Night.

(By Frank Heath.) Fond du Lac, Wis., Feb. 18.—George Young, a former Co. E guard, now identified with the Co. K team of Rockford, was the dominant factor in the humiliation of the "E" squad on the home pasture Thursday evening, when a combination Janesville, Rockford and Fond du Lac aggregation swept the locals into the discard under a 22 to 12 count.

Company E played miserable ball. The team lacked the dash and pep that has been so characteristic of previous home performances. The players missed shot after shot, while the best Mike Roberts could do in the free line was to score safe on six out of fifteen chances while Jerry Murphy fizzled on the two he attempted.

Young was the pivot around which the invaders offense and defense was built. He played a wonderful floor game and his work at basketball bordered on the sensational. Out of eleven free shots, he negotiated eight of them successfully.

Edler Scores Once. Fletcher and Edler, two Janesville representatives on the visiting team did not show up to press notices. Fletcher was credited with a field marker in this first period when the full headed amateurs struck the V shaped brace over the backstop and catapulted into the cage. In the second half he raised a field score on a long drive and Edler came across with his lone rally of the game on an acrobatic heave over his shoulder.

Gharrity, another Rockford offering, appeared bent on establishing a record for penalizations, seven fouls being called against him. Gharrity's work bordered on the rough type, a majority of the penalizations being checked against him for tripping.

The American association baseball star is a past master at this trick. Johnson and Roberts were the only players to break into the scoring record. Roberts contributed all of the local points in the first period, getting one field goal and four free throws while in the second half Johnson contributed two field goals and Roberts two free shots. The team of the Appleton ideals played forward for Fond du Lac in the first period but Leppine got into action in the second.

The series with the Rockford Janesville team can hardly be figured as having any bearing on the state championship. In fact, the best series at Janesville was regarded as more or less of a joke when discussed as state title events. On the present occasion there are only two Janesville players with the team, Young and Gharrity, being regulars on the Rockford team while Gray, who played center is from the university.

Need New Players. Unless Basie can secure some timber to utilize while the regular players take turns in resting up, the team is due for a series of trimmings on the home court. Bradshaw is fit for the hospital, being a victim of a pronounced attack of the grip. Murphy can hardly waddle because of an injury to his side sustained at Freeport Wednesday night. And by the way—Freeport handed the locals a trimming by an 18 to 16 count. When the Freeport Y. M. C. A. can beat up a bunch like Roberts, Bradshaw, etc., you can bank on it that the team is played out.

Five games last week and four this week, a total of nine games in ten days is too stiff a proposition for the hospital, being a victim of a pronounced attack of the grip. Murphy can hardly waddle because of an injury to his side sustained at Freeport Wednesday night. And by the way—Freeport handed the locals a trimming by an 18 to 16 count. When the Freeport Y. M. C. A. can beat up a bunch like Roberts, Bradshaw, etc., you can bank on it that the team is played out.

Basie has wired to Torney to report Saturday afternoon and indications are that the big fellow will be back with the outfit for the game with the Twin City Pedestals here Saturday night. If he shows up it will mean a big help to the outfit.

The score of the Thursday affair follows: Fond du Lac Janerocks 22 to 12. Edler 1, Fletcher 2, Gray 3, Young 4, Murphy 5, Roberts 6, Johnson 7, Johnson 8, Johnson 9, Johnson 10, Johnson 11, Johnson 12, Johnson 13, Johnson 14, Johnson 15, Johnson 16, Johnson 17, Johnson 18, Once aroused Alix had taken up the gauntlet with no uncertain hand. Her first words carried the war into the enemy's camp and they were barbed.

"What do you mean?" said Gerry dully. He had not anticipated a defense.

"I mean what you have deduced with an effort. What are you but a philanderer in little things where Alan is in great? What have you ever done to hold me or any other woman? I respected you once for what you were going to be. That has died. Did you think I was going to make you into a man?"

Gerry stood, breathing hard, a great despondency in his heart. Alix went on pitilessly. "What have you become? A monumental time-server on the world and you are surprised that a worker reaches the prize that you cannot attain. The trouble with you is that you have built your life altogether on traditions. It is a tradition that your women are faithful, so you need not exert yourself to hold yours. It is a tradition that you can do no wrong, so you need not exert yourself to doing anything at all! You are playing with ghosts, Gerry. Your party was over a generation ago."

Alix had calmed down. There was still time for Gerry to choke her to good effect. The hour could yet be his. But he did not know it. Snarling under the lash of Alix's tongue he made a final and disastrous false step.

"You try to humiliate me by placing me back to back with Alan?" he said, with his new-born sneer. Alix appraised it with calm eyes and found it rather attractive. "Well, let me tell you that Alan is so small a man that if I dropped out of the world today, he'd sail for Africa tomorrow and think for the rest of his life of his escape from you as a close shave."

Alix sprang to her feet. She was trembling. Gerry felt a throb of exultation. It was his turn to wound.

"What do you mean?" said Alix very quietly, but it was the quiet of suppressed passion at white heat.

"I mean that Alan is the kind of man who finds other men's wives an economy. He would take everything you have that's worth taking, but not you."

Alix's eyes blazed at him from her white face. "Please go away," she said. He started to speak. "Please go away," she repeated. Her lips were quivering and her face twitched in a way that was terrifying to Gerry. He hurried out repeating to himself over and over, "You have made Alix cry. You have made Alix cry."

Alix toyed with the silver on her dressing-table until he had gone and then she swept across the room to her little writing-desk and wrote the note that Alan had found half an hour later in his rooms.

Gerry stood in the hall outside Alix's room for a moment hoping to hear a sob, a cry, anything for an excuse to go back. Instead he heard the scratch of a pen but he was too troubled to deduce anything from that. He went slowly down the stairs and out into the street. The biting winter air braced him. He started to walk rapidly. At the end of an hour he found himself standing on a deserted pier. He took off his hat and let the wind cool his head. "I have made a woman cry—Alix!" He turned and walked slowly back to the avenue and into his club but he still felt uneasy. A waiter brought a whisky and soda and put it at his elbow. Gerry turned on him. "Who told you to bring that?" Then he felt ashamed of his petulance. "It's all right, George," he said, more gently than he had spoken for many a day. "but I don't want it. Take it away."

He went up the avenue to his florist's and stood outside trying to decide whether it should be one mass of blood red or a color scheme. Suddenly the plate glass caught a reflection and threw it in his face. Gerry turned. A four-wheeler was passing. He could not see the occupant but on top was a large, familiar trunk marked with a yellow globe. On the trunk was a familiar label. He stared at it and the label stared back at him and finally danced before his mazed eyes as the cab disappeared into the traffic.

Gerry stood for a long while, stunned. He saw a lady bow to him from a carriage and afterwards he remembered that he had not bowed back. Somebody ran into him. He looked back at the flowers massed in the window, remembered that he did not need them now, and drew slowly away. Two men hailed him from the other side of the street. Gerry braced himself, nodded to them and hailed a passing hansom. From the direction Alix's cab had taken he knew the station she was bound for. As he arrived on the platform they were giving the last call for the Montreal Express. He caught sight of Alix hurrying through the gates and followed. As she reached the first Pullman, somebody rapped on the window of the drawing room. Gerry saw Alan's face pressed against the pane. He watched Alix stop, turn and climb the steps of the car and then he wheeled and hurried from the station.

Where could he go? Not to his club and Alan's. His face would betray the scandal with which the club would be buzzing tomorrow. Not to his big comfortable house. It would be too gloomy. Even in disrepair, Alix had imparted to its somber oak and deep shadows the glow of buoyant life. When she was there one felt as though there were flowers in the house. Gerry was seized with a great desire to hide from his world, his mother, himself. He pictured the scene-heads in the papers. That the name of Lansing should be found in that gallery! It was too much. He could not face it.

He bought a morning paper full of shipping news and, getting into a taxi, gave the address of his bank. On the way he studied the sailings column. He found what he wanted. The Gunter due to sail that afternoon for Brazil, Pernambuco the first stop.

At the bank Gerry drew out the balance of his current account. It amounted to something over two thousand dollars. He took most of it in Bank of England notes. Then he started home to pack but before he reached the house a vision of the servants, hurried after helping their mistress off, commiserating him to each other, pitying him to his face perhaps, or in the case of the old butler, suppressing a great emotion, was too much for him. He drove instead to a big department store and in an hour had bought a complete outfit. He lunched at one of the quiet restaurants that divide down town from up. The people about him were visible to French and Spanish. Already he felt as if his exile had begun.

The Gunter was to sail at three from Brooklyn. Gerry crossed by the ferry. He did not get out of his cab. Over his baggage, piled outside and in, he caught a glimpse of the suspension bridge. Years and years ago his father had led him across that bridge when it was the eighth wonder of the world. Gerry gave a great sigh at the memory. He had not invaded Brooklyn since. As the cab threaded the interminable and reeking length of Furman street he looked out and felt himself upon an alien shore.

He had avoided buying a ticket. As the Gunter warped out, the porter came to him. "I understand you have no ticket?"

"No," said Gerry, drawing a roll of bills. "How much is the passage to Pernambuco?"

"The purser fidgeted. 'This is irregular, sir.'"

"Is it?" said Gerry, indifferently. "I have no ticket forms," said the purser, weakening.

"I don't want a ticket," said Gerry. "I want a good room and three square meals a day."

Long, quiet days on a quiet sea are a master sedative to a troubled mind. Gerry had a great deal to think through. He sat by the hour with hands loosely clasped, his eyes far out on the ocean, tracing the course of his married life and measuring the grounds for Alix's arraignment. Gerry was just and generous to others' faults but not to his own. He had forgotten the sting of Alix's words and, to his growing amazement, saw in himself their justification. A time-server he certainly had been. But he reviewed the lives of many other men in his own leisurely class and decided that he was not without company. After all, what was there in America for such men to do except make more money?

For the first time he was struck by the narrowness of American life. There was only one line of effort. The whole people thronged a single causeway. They made a provincial demand that all should dress alike, look alike, think alike. They pressed on in a body to the single goal of wealth and when they got there they were lost.

Individualists were rare and unwelcome. Boys stoned Chinamen because they were different; they followed a turbaned Asiatic, strayed to an unfamiliar shore, with jeers; an astounded Briton, faultlessly dressed, found his spurs the sensation of a street. Each of these incidents Gerry had witnessed with amusement and dismissed without a thought. Now they became so many weather-vanes all pointing the same way. How was it Alan had summed up the history of America? "Men, machinery, machinery!"

With the thought of Alan his brow puckered. Here he felt no impulse to indulgence. Some day he would meet Alan and when he did he would break him. The score he had expressed to Alix for Alan and Alan's nature was without understanding but it was genuine. He knew there were such men and he ascribed all their acts to a de-basement beyond regeneration and none to temperament. From moral luxury there was no appeal beyond the sin itself.

The landfall of Pernambuco awoke him from reveries and introspection. He did not look upon this palm-strewn coast as a land of new beginnings—he sought merely a lethargic shore.

The ship crawled in from an oily sea to the long strip of harbor behind the reef. Above the sun blazed from a bowl of unbroken blue; on land, the multicolored houses spread like a rainbow under a dark cloud of brown-tinted roofs. Giant plane trees cast hots of shade on the cobble esplanade of the boat quay. In their shelter a negress squatted behind her basin of conchous and another before a tray of fried fish. Around them lounged a ragged crew, boatmen, stereotypes and ruffian, black, brown and white. Beyond the track was a line of high, shingled houses, each painted a different color, all weather-stained, and some with rusted balconies that threatened to topple on to the passer-by. One bore the legend, "Hotel d'Europe." There Gerry installed himself.

CHAPTER VII

Between the hour of writing her note to Alan and the moment when she stepped on the train Alix had had no time to think. She was still driven by the impulse of anger that Gerry's words had aroused. She did not reflect that the wound was only to her pride. Alan held open the door of the drawing room. She passed in and he closed it. Alix threw back her veil and looked at him. With a quick stride forward he caught her to him and kissed her mouth until she gasped for breath. With a flash she remembered his own words. "If I ever kiss you I shall bring your soul out between your lips." To Alix's amazement she did not feel an answering fire. The kiss had brought her soul out between her lips. Her soul stood naked before her and one's naked soul is an ugly thing. The kiss disrobed her, too, and from that last bourne of shame Alix suddenly revolted.

Gusping, she pushed Alan from her. Their eyes met. His were burning, hers were frightened. She moved slowly backward to the door and with her hand behind her opened the latch. Alan did not move. He knew that if he could not hold her with his eyes he could not hold her at all. The train started. Alix passed through the door and rushed to the platform. The porter ter was about to drop the trap on the steps. Alix slipped by him. With all her force she pushed open the door and jumped. The train was moving very slowly but Alix roared and would have fallen had it not been for a passing baggage-man. He caught her and, still in his arms, Alix looked back. Alan's white face was at the window. He looked steadily at her.

"Ye almost wint with him, Miss," said the baggage-man, with a full brogue and a twinkling eye.

"How did you know?" said Alix, dazed.

At the strange question the baggage-man's longer upper lip drew down to gravity. "Where d'ye think I was when ye stipt off the train into me arms?" he asked solemnly.

"That's right," said Alix as she followed his lead to a cab. She got in and then shook hands with her escort. He looked at the dollar bill her grasp left behind.

"That wasn't called for, Miss. It was enough for me to have saved ye from a fall."

"You didn't save me," said Alix with a bewildering smile. "I saved myself."

She left him scratching his head over this fresh enigma.

"Your desk, please, Miss."

"Why?"

At a recent examination of 151 men who wished to become citizens of the United States, he had asked one applicant the usual questions and had re- ceived satisfactory replies, although it was evident that the man had a hard time fathoming some of the ques- tions. At last he asked:

"And now, do you belong to any society or organization inimical to the government of the United States?"

This was too much for the man, and he was silent. Judge Dyer explained the meaning, and again asked the question. A gleam of understanding overcame the face of the man, and he replied:

"Yes, Judge, I'm a Democrat."

At a domestic economy lesson in Chicago a young mother was asked by the lecturer to state briefly the best way to keep milk from souring.

After some reflection the young woman replied:

The Real Albanians.

South of Valona lies the only part of Albania where the people call themselves Albanians, or something like it. It is said, according to Sir Charles Elliot, that the names Arberet and Arberoe are applied to this region and its inhabitants. The natives of the rest of the country know what is meant when Turks speak of Arnauts and Europeans of Albanians, but they do not use this name themselves, preferring to be called Shkypetar, which means eagle men. Northern Albanians are also generally known as Ghegs, southern Albanians as Tosks, but these names are considered not quite complimentary.

Combing Won't Rid Hair Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will grow finer, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

The Army of Heaven

By REV. L. W. GOSNELL,
Superintendent of Men, Moody Bible
Institute of Chicago

TEXT—God's host.—Gen. 32:2.

The angels compose the army of heaven. The captain of this host of the Lord is no other than Jesus Christ, and it was he, we think, who appeared as the angel of the Lord in the Old Testament. The multitude of those who bow to his command is suggested by the fact that in the garden of Gethsemane he might have called for twelve legions of angels and they would have been given him; they are said to number ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands.

We would speak of two instances especially in which this shining host has figured.

The first has to do with the story of Jacob. He was on his way back from Haran after an exile of twenty years. Thoughts of meeting Esau on the morrow troubled him, for he was learning that "sins come home to roost." How beautiful to read, "And Jacob went on his way and the angels of God met him. And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's host: and he called the name of the place Mahanaim," i. e., two hosts. The idea which he expresses is this: that while about him is his little encampment, all unpurged men of war, yet above him is God's army for his defense.

The other instance is referred to in the Thirty-fourth Psalm: "The angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him, and delivereth them." This Psalm seems to have been written when David was fleeing from Saul. The night would bring its terrors for the little company which was with him, but his faith saw the mountains full of God's chariots, and expressed itself in the words we have quoted. It will be noted that he refers to the angel of the Lord who is at the head of the heavenly army, but his words include the vast multitude which camps about the saint.

In this age the question may be raised as to whether such a truth has any importance for us; indeed some may even feel that to speak of angels puts a barrier between us and God. But if we will understand that these are simply his messengers fulfilling the voice of his word, the difficulty vanishes. We have in mind a couple of incidents which show that this truth may become of vital concern in times of danger.

For example, the biographer of Mrs. John Scudder, wife of the famous missionary to India, tells of a most interesting experience in her life. With her children she was being carried through the jungle by native bearers. The tent had been pitched for the night and this frail woman with her babes was looking to her servants for protection; but as twilight deepened, the roar of lions and tigers began sounding through the jungle and struck terror into the hearts of the men. One after another took to flight, leaving this woman and her children alone among the wild beasts. She prayed to God for protection and it was granted her. That her danger was real is shown by the fact that she heard the lions and tigers sniffling about her tent in the night; and yet no paw was raised against her, and when the morning dawned her children were sleeping in peace and safety. Her biographer suggests an explanation which is worthy of attention. He says: "There was an inner circle; for the angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him and delivereth them."

Again this subject is suggested in the last entry found in the journal of that Christian soldier, Chisee Gordon. As is well known, he lost his life in the siege of Khartum. The reinforcements came all too late, but nevertheless the faith of this man did not fail. He says in his closing entry, "The hosts are with us—Mahanaim." It is Jacob's old word, and shows that the faith of this Christian hero realized that God had sent his angels. It is true that Gordon lost his life; but he could lay it down in the confidence that it was not protection, but that in the wisdom of his heavenly Father his death was permitted.

A priest of Buddha, in the city of Siam, Burma, has become a disciple of Christ. Such instances are very rare for a priest of Buddha, protected and cared for, lives a life of ease. His position is exalted and his followers worship him. Having a knowledge of herbs and roots, he will become a Burmese doctor and go among his people, healing the sick and preaching Christ.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERHOOD

Pive thousand names more on the Church roll at Jerusalem within a few weeks after Pentecost. Many of these persons were strangers from distant parts. They had oversteered their time to learn more of their newly espoused faith. The present speedy methods of obtaining remittances were undreamed of. They began to be in need. It is evident that many of the resident converts also were poor. All adherents to the new religion, also, would be boycotted. Distress prevailed. Under circumstances like these, that radiant, flower, benevolence, burst forth in beauty, and filled the Church with its lasting fragrance. * * *

The congregation of believers set themselves to meet the emergency. Not by any edict, but spontaneously, there arose a species of communism. Possessors of real estate converted it into cash, and put the proceeds at the disposal of the apostles for the relief of their fellow-believers. One of the most conspicuous examples of this voluntary surrender of property was that of Ananias, a Levite of Cyprus. The apostles called him "Son of Consolation," in recognition of the relief his generosity afforded. * * *

The trait of Ananias's sin was envy. He wanted to outshine Jesus. He coveted a still higher-sounding title. But there was a dash of cupidity with his envy. He was not willing to pay the full price. He would like to avoid it. There would be room for pity had Ananias been overtaken by sudden temptation. But the act was deliberate. It was a matter of conspiracy between the man and his wife. * * *

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN

Communism is impossible. If an equal division of things was made to-day a revolution would have to be made to-morrow. Some inveterately acquire, others are inveterately loose. Equalization in material things will be achieved by equalization in moral, mental, and physical qualities. Such communism can not be forced. It can not be put on. It is from within outward. The arbitrary character of the divisions into chapters has illustration in this incident. The fifth chapter starts with the distinctive "but." One must needs go back to the fourth chapter to find the true connection. The root of Ananias's sin strikes across this forced hiatus. It was envy of Jesus. * * *

Ananias is an odious name. It is synonym of hypocrisy, as Cain is of murder, Herod of cruelty, and Judas of treachery. The fate of each illustrates the aphorism, "The wages of sin is death." * * *

Hypocrisy, envy, rivalry are the dead flies that make the ointment of much of the current benevolence to send forth a stinking savor. * * *

Sincerity is indispensable. The eye must be single, the motive pure. The would-be benevolent man must not cherish the unworthy hope that his apparently disinterested deed will rebound to his own advantage. Like his Master, he is not to be ministered unto, but to minister. * * *

The Bible abounds in punitive judgments. They are so many object-lessons. They must needs be striking to arrest attention. In the long run they are really acts of mercy. Where one is consumed, many are saved by the deterrent power of exemplary punishment. * * *

Psalm CXXIX 105-112
HOW TO PUT THE BIBLE INTO LIFE

Before ever moving pictures were dreamed of the world already had them in the Sacred Scriptures. The scenes of the Bible move. They are instinct with life. They are full of color and motion. But they not only move, they move in turn those who give attention to them. They impel from evil and toward good, convince the mind, quicken the conscience, confirm proper impulses. They move toward, the good, the true, the beautiful, the Divine. In this high sense the Bible is not only inspired, it is inspirational. Its teachings and principles are fundamental to life and consequently are of universal and perpetual application. It is as Carlisle called it "All men's Book!" In the jungle of Africa, in the mart of the metropolis, everywhere and always God's Word is man's lamp and light. Neglect of it is only against one's self. Use of it is highest wisdom. But it is not a bare and rigid duty. It is also a delight. It is as sweet as honey from the comb.

MANY SOLDIER ARTISTS PURSUE ART AT FRONT: WILL NOT JUDGE WORKS

Paris, Feb. 18.—Many soldier-artists continue to pursue their art at the front, as well as in the trenches. But there is no difference in the soldier-musician sounds the pastoral note and seeks inspiration from the quiet of the country. Some of the latter combatants are of the mean order and there is notably one score—an opera in three acts—which bears the hallmarks of a masterpiece. The production of this work is anything but costly as there are only two scenes, the sea and a mountain pinnacle, and three characters. * * *

M. Cheusi was so struck by the dignity and masterly treatment of the score that he suspected the anonymous author of being possibly one of the luminaries of his profession who by this subterfuge wished to test the merit of his work on his native soil. He wrote on equal terms with his less-known rivals. Accordingly an assembly of musical Olympians was convened to hear the work. But none of them could recognize the style of any of their contemporaries. All agreed that a new masterpiece had been created for the glory of French music. * * *

Some of the works submitted at present will be definitely judged before peace is declared.

SEED CORN FOR THE NORTH

Agricultural Bulletin Warns of Danger in Planting Corn Which is Adapted to Warmer Climate.

The frequent shortages of seed corn in the northern states are becoming more serious as the importance of the crop in this area increases. In 1903 the acreage of corn in the northern tier of states—New England, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Idaho, and Washington—was 7,616,152 acres. Last year it was 11,121,000. If the industry is to continue to grow, say specialists in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, more attention must be paid to the seed supply and the attempt to grow varieties which require a long season in which to mature must be abandoned.

Varieties must be found or bred which will make a rapid growth and mature in the short period between the last killing spring frost and the first killing fall frost. When man aids nature by selecting and preserving seed only from individuals which show promise, in several years the habits and characteristics can be changed considerably, and perhaps a variety which at first failed to mature may be so changed that it becomes suitable.

Even when a variety has been thus adapted to a locality, so that it will mature under ordinary conditions, there will come seasons so unfavorable that it will not mature. If only each year, all the work of adaptation is lost. The proper way is to gather enough from a good crop to supply seed for two or three years thereafter. Good seed will keep without depreciation this long.

Go out into the cornfield before the first killing frost, gather a good supply of the best ears to be found on stalks growing in competition with others; hang these ears up in some place where they will be protected, but at the same time have a good chance to dry out quickly; when dry enough to shell, do so, and put the seed away where it will not be exposed to too great changes in temperature and moisture. Any man can follow the simple directions here given and plant his fields every year with good, vigorous growing seed which he knows is adapted to his farm.

The matter of a seed supply is a case of avoiding trouble, rather than trying to remedy the trouble after it has arrived. If no seed of the 1914 crop is available, the farmer is in bad shape. He must purchase his seed, and in doing this he is in grave danger of obtaining either poor seed, or seed of late-maturing varieties, or seed of early-maturing varieties, or seed of a variety which has been well cared for, even though it is not thoroughly mature, is almost certain to give better results than imported seed. By home-grown seed is meant seed grown on the farm, or in the same county, or where the same general conditions affected the crop. The point to be emphasized is that the farmer in Minnesota, or North Dakota, should not send for seed grown in southern South Dakota or Iowa. If this is done, the crop resulting will almost certainly be immature next fall when it is necessary to harvest.

An exception to this may be the dry-land portion of the more southern states. The corn growers there are confronted nearly every year with drought. In order to grow corn at all, it is necessary to grow early-maturing varieties which will "make" before the drought occurs. Some excellent crops were secured in 1915, but in some instances good crops were secured from varieties which are not early maturing and therefore not well adapted for northern planting. Too much care can not be exercised in learning the facts before purchasing seed corn there. This seed will be widely offered for sale this year.

There are certain localities, even in the most northern states, where corn did mature sufficiently to provide seed for 1916. It is possible that the department of agriculture may be able to assist farmers in obtaining seed from these sources. In this connection an appeal is made for every grower of northern seed corn, having good seed to sell, to furnish
